

MORAY COUNCIL

> TRUSTING THE SYSTEM . . .

With the ever increasing need for meeting targets and ensuring that all relevant rules and regulations are respected, choosing the right suppliers is of increasing importance for local authorities. That's why for Moray Council, finding a pre-qualification service they can trust was of crucial importance.

Denna Snow, Procurement Administrator at the council explains their reasons for choosing Constructionline, 'We needed a system we could trust. One that would provide us with accurate details on the suppliers, and at the same time listen to our concerns if we have any and work with us towards the solution. Constructionline has been fully structured to meet the needs of procurers'.

> CONFIDENT PROCUREMENT . . .

The procurers at Moray Council have made Constructionline part of the process when choosing suppliers for all of their £14 million a year construction projects. However, having access to the system is of no value if it is not being utilised in the right way, and this is what Denna has ensured they do at the council.

She explains, 'All our construction PQQ's and ITT's ask for the Constructionline number of the tenderer. In this way, we reduce the amount of time and administration by being able to get the details from the Constructionline database. This helps us and our suppliers save time and money and we encourage all of our construction suppliers to register with Constructionline and maximise these benefits both for us and for themselves'.

'We encourage all our suppliers to register with Constructionline and maximise the benefits both for us and for themselves'.

Denna Snow
Procurement Administrator
at Moray Council